When it comes to video conference call, Skype may be the first one that flashes into your mind. Whether you're going to gather all your family members in one place for regular catch ups, or start an impromptu meeting with coworkers for business things, Skype will not let you down. With its help, you can make a one to one video conference call or a group call as easy as possible.

Part 1: Set Up One to One free Video Conference Call on Skype

Whenever you want to have a face-to-face catch up with someone, Skype is always there for you. All things to do is to make sure both of you have Skype installed on computers, iPad, iPhone or Android devices. If necessary, get webcams and headsets ready.

Then, launch Skype. Check the one that you're going to have a video conference call with and click "Video Call icon". That's it! Now, you can enjoy the Skype conference video.

Part 2: Start Group Video Conference Call on Skype

Although one to one video conference call works pretty well, it will fall flat when you intend to invite a group into a same video conference call. Under this circumstance, trying group video conference call is a good choice.

Install and run Skype on computer, iPhone, iPad and Android devices. In the upper navigation bar of the main window, click "Contacts > Create New Group...". When a small window appears in the lower right corner. Check the ones that you're going to invite into a group and then click "Video Call icon" to get started.

Skype gives you the power to gather another 9 persons into your group video conference call. You can meet them on the same page, and share files and screens, making the group video conference call much more vivid, interesting and efficient.
